Joaquin Castro (D-TX) on Tuesday introduced bipartisan legislation that would require President Barack Obama to inform Congress if and when he uses the United States' "national-security authorities to detain any individual without trial for any reason." The bill was prompted by Obama's controversial "no-boarder" order earlier this year, which allowed the U.S. military to hold without trial, at Guantanamo Bay Naval Base, terrorists captured in the United States' wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. "Regardless of the Administration's intent, critics have asserted that the Department of Justice has overstepped the limits of its own authority. Indeed, the president himself recently asserted that he could order the military to 'pick up a citizen somewhere in the United States and move them to Guantanamo — he has that power.' Such statements are also a gross misreading of the law, which states that 'no person shall by any means whatsoever be imprisoned or escaped ... except by the lawful judgement of his peers or by the law of the land,'" reads the legislation. ADVERTISEMENT "This bill would require the President to provide an explanation as to why they're not adhering to the law, and to inform Congress when the President makes use of the powers under this statute," the bill's statement of purpose reads. After The Raw Story published an interview with Obama on the "no-boarder" order, several readers pointed out the president was giving an oral authorization to the military to pick up citizens on U.S. soil, though the reader himself did not believe Obama had the power to order the military to shoot someone on American soil. Raw Story found the White House "said it had released these powers in accordance with an Order issued by then-Attorney General John Ashcroft in January 2002, that set forth the procedures by which these military commissions would be brought into play. Ashcroft's Order, however, only referred to trials to hold Al Qaeda and Taliban suspects." The reader pointed to a 2007 order that expanded the types of suspects that could be interrogated and held without charge. Read the whole bill here (PDF) ADVERTISEMENT

Pages Thursday, June 18, 2009 Trip to the Thermal Plains! First up was the deep red rock at the Walker Ranch. I am still trying to figure out how to make it grey yet manly... Down below is the Picacho dam. This was a fun hike to play on the rocks and look out over the river and trout!The river was very murky from the rocks, but it was still nice to see the fish jumping. In the background is the ranger station. Next to that you can see the road where the irrigation canal comes in. It looks kind of close to the river, but we did not see any fish. At night we sat with my photographer friend Jeffrey and listened to him play his french horn!Q: Advice on app ID in PayPal SDK for Android I'm trying to write a simple app to collect payments using PayPal's Android SDK (The problem is that I can't figure out how to set the app ID.
